Despite Extra Cost In Building Capitol, Governor Thinks This Can Be Omitted.

DAVIDSON WANTS TO MAKE SHOW

Thinks There Is Sufficient Money In The Treasury To Pay All The Necessary Expenses Just At Present.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8.—Notwithstanding the unprecedented large appropriations made by the last legislature, for new state capitol, new buildings at state institutions, new normal schools at Milwaukee and La Crosse, the state board of assessment, composed of Governor Davidson, Secretary of State Frey and State Treasurer Dahl, are determined to remit all the tax authorized by law to be levied for the general expenses of the state. It is believed that this can be done, in spite of the fact that a year ago the funds of the state were drafted low by the remission of all the state tax as well as half of the school tax, and the additional fact of large expenditures authorized by the last legislature. The board met yesterday to discuss the situation and a tentative agreement was made to levy only the school tax, which the state collects from the counties and apportions back again to the counties according to school population. The capitol commission has an appropriation of $600,000 a year for nine years. The state prison at Waupun is to have a costly building twice factory, but those expensive operations are delayed and so the money appropriated for them will not be used as soon as expected. Revised reports and estimates will be had from the various departments and commissions and the board will meet again next Saturday to take final action. The receipts of the state for next year are estimated at about $6,000,000, and may be more than that on account of large taxes on inheritances.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8.—The thirteenth triennial session of the National Council of Congregational churches began in this city today and will continue during the next ten days. For the first time in the history of the denomination, the missionary and benevolent organizations of the church are to hold their annual meetings in conjunction with the meeting of the National Council. This largely increased the attendance of delegates and visitors, among whom are many prominent divines, educators, and business men. Some of the announced speakers for the meetings include Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, Rev. Dr. Newell Hillis of Brooklyn, President G. Stanley Hall of Clark University, President Francis E. Clark of the United Christian Endeavor Society, and many other Congregational leaders.

What is expected to be a most important session of the council will be devoted to the subject of union of the denomination with Methodist Protestants and United Brethren. It is believed that a majority of the delegates favor the union, which will be recommended by the committee which has had the matter in charge since the meeting in Des Moines three years ago. At the same time some of the strongest churches in Congregationalism have placed themselves on record as being opposed to union on the terms which are proposed, and they have virtually filed notice that if the union is effected they will withdraw and continue their work on an independent basis.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 8.—In his message to the state legislature which met in special session today Gov. The governor urged the passage of a new primary election law, one avoiding the imposition of even the slightest limitation upon the power of the people freely and directly to express their views and to have their views control in the nomination of candidates. He further urged the legislation for uniform bookkeeping for the railroads engaged in interstate commerce and legislation restricting the issuance of railroad passes supplemental to legislation governing the interstate transportation.

OLD SOLDIERS ARE TO BE PROTECTED BY THE LAWS

State Pension Department To Get After Law-ers Who Try To Fleece The Veterans.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8.—The pension department of the office of the adjutant general here is taking up with the authorities at Washington the matter of pension attorneys demanding fees from old soldiers for whom pensions are secured through the efforts of the state pension office. Instances have repeatedly arisen where pension attorneys, sometimes called "pension sharks," have years ago had claims of old soldiers in hand and have not secured the pensions, but later the state pension department took the claims in hand and secured the desired pensions or increases. Then the attorneys would demand fees from the successful applicant. The latest incident is one in which the old claim was handled 16 years ago by an attorney at Washington, and then re-lected, but within the past three months was taken up by the state office and allowed. Now the attorney who handled the rejected claim 16 years ago wants a fee and threatens suit unless paid. The state pension office will take the matter up and see whether these old contracts with attorneys are such that the attorneys can demand pay in such cases as this, and it is also desired to know by what means the attorneys become possessed of inside facts of the pension bureau at Washington. The state pension department is exceptionally successful in securing pensions and increases for old soldiers, and charges absolutely no fee whatever, but nevertheless many old soldiers answer advertisements of pension "sharks" and pay heavily for poor and inefficient service.

A NARROW ESCAPE
FOR AUTO PARTY

THOS. C. JACKS AND H. H. ZIGLER
NEARLY MET WITH MISHAP.

JUMPED FROM THE MACHINE

Lost the Road Between Edgerton and Janesville—Nearly Ran Into Fence.

That interurban proposition between Janesville and Madison promises to cause more than a little worry to the promoters after completion. Thos. C. Jacks of Titus, Tenn., and H. H. Zigler of Columbus, Ohio, who represent the latest coterie of men who are looking over the situation, had an experience last evening which might have cost them their lives and may hasten the construction of the road to avoid future mishaps to unwary travelers.

By Automobile

Yesterday morning Mr. Jacks and Mr. Zigler left Janesville by automobile for Madison, going by way of Milton. Despite the cold, raw wind they enjoyed the outing and discussed, with wisdom, the number of people their cars could accommodate when one was running. The run from Janesville to Milton, thence to Edgerton, Stoughton and McFarland, was made without adventure. A slight delay and the approaching shades of night decided them to turn back and they stopped at Edgerton.

Night Dark

The night was dark, so dark that even the lights of the machine but feebly marked the road. By going slowly they managed to reach a cross-road above the four-mile bridge, where the several branches spread out in different directions. Enclosed comfortably in the back seat, Mr. Zigler and Mr. Jacks directed their "driver" to investigate a tall signboard to see where they were. In some way the machine was started while he was away, and turning from the road gained momentum at every revolution of the wheels.

Curtains No Barrier

Despite the fact the side curtains were fastened down, Mr. Zigler rose to the occasion and jumped to safety through the curtains and over the door. His companion, not so fortunate, made a slide for life through space and dirt and landed in a heap in the ditch. Meanwhile the driver jumped for the machine and stopped it just as it ran onto the embankment near a fence. No one was hurt, but the nerves of the two interurban men were on edge.

Not Safe Yet

But the party was not safe yet. The Four-Mile bridge was crossed safely, but in the darkness the turn to the left towards the city was missed and the machine sped along the Evansville turnpike. By the unanimous vote of Mr. Zigler, Mr. Jacks was appointed as "Pilot" and was delegated to stop at a farmhouse and inquire the road. His first venture was uneventful; a large congregation of hounds not apprehending his southern eloquence, drove him in hot retreat to the auto.

Alarms a Party

His next trial was more successful. A farmhouse brilliantly lighted appeared and Mr. Jacks sought the door in vain, finally rapping most vigorously on the window. "Down in my country everyone carries a gun," said Mr. Jacks this morning, "and the way those hounds went up when I rapped reminded me of home!" However, their troubles ended here as they were put on the right road and able to reach the city safely.

Out Again

Not discouraged, however, the gentleman made another trip to Madison today, going by the river route this time. Both gentlemen are enthusiastic over the prospects for an interurban and have telegraphed for another gentleman interested in the project to meet them here Thursday.

HIGH SCHOOL ITEMS
CHANGE IN CUSTOM

Local School Eleven to go to Evansville for a Game on Saturday Next.

For several years past it has been the custom of Professor Threlk to make a short address to the students of the high school each morning before the first classes. This year the custom is to be changed and each member of the faculty will be asked to vary the program by speaking, as well as the leaders of the different literary societies. This will give a variety to the morning exercises and add interest.

At the meeting of the Husk Lycra last evening the question for the first John debate between the two societies was submitted by the Forum society and rejected by the Lycra. The question presented was, "Resolved, That for the rehabilitation and development of the American Marsh it is destined to further the policy of an increase in the tariff." Suggestions as to amendments of the above question will be submitted to the Forum members. The first debate between the two societies will be held in the assembly room of the school on November 22. No admission will be charged for this but at the second one held February 14th between the same two societies an admission fee will be asked. This program will include several selections by the Glee Club.

On Saturday next the high school football players will go to Evansville to meet the players from that school. This team is showing remarkable strength this year, having played a tie game with Madison High and defeated the Hobart High. They are heavier than the local players but it is expected that Janesville's speed will counterbalance the weight. It is expected that the same team that met Madison on Saturday will play this week.

Janesville Daily Gazette, Tuesday, Oct. 8, 1867.—Woman's Rights Convention.—A Woman's Rights Convention is advertised to take place at the court room tomorrow at 10 a. m. There will be a meeting in the evening at 7:30 o'clock at which time Rev. Sumner Ellis, of Milwaukee, will deliver an address. We can promise the public that this address will be well worth their attention.

A Pleasant Party.—Last evening a large party of ladies and gentlemen were invited to partake of the generous hospitality of J. Burgess, Esq., the occasion being the anniversary of his birthday. The company consisted largely of the old residents of this city with a few intimate friends from the adjoining towns and each guest seemed to catch some of the genial spirit that is usually manifested by the host and hostess on such social occasions. At ten o'clock a pleasant episode occurred that was really not down on the evening's program, as far as the host was concerned, but was one of those agreeable surprises that will take place sometimes in the best regulated companies. Some of Mr. Burgess' friends had conceived the notion that an endearing token of regard in the shape of a present would not be out of place on such an occasion and had selected a magnificient fire pitcher, with goblets and saucers to match, as the articles to be presented. While the master of the house was busy with his guests in another room the articles were placed upon a stand in the parlor and Hon. T. C. Stoen was selected to make the presentation. When everything was in readiness Mr. Burgess was led into the parlor and presented with these magnificient gifts.

RUSSIA YIELDS TO CHINA.

New Telegraph Convention in Contrast to Japan's Procedure.

Peiping, Oct. 8.—A new telegraph convention between Russia and China was signed here Monday. Under it China recovers all her previous telegraph rights in Russian Manchuria and 2,000 miles of these and connections are formally turned back to her. Russia surrenders the privileges she has exercised since the Boxer outbreak and in the future will pay telegraph royalties to China.

This is quite different from the Japanese procedure in Manchuria. Japan increased her claims for telegraph and telephone privileges and extended both methods of communication in defiance of the sovereignty of China, entangling this matter with the entire political question in Manchuria.

Wages of Operators Increased.
Topkapi, Kien, Oct. 8.—The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad company Monday announced an increase in the wages of all telegraph operators on the system. The increase went into effect October 1 and came as a surprise to the men. The road employs non-union operators.

operated on last week for appendicitis, tradition insists that some part complete, in order that the incompleteness may remind its owner that, like his father Abraham, he is but a stranger upon the earth.

AN UNFORTUNATE RULING

Attorney General Bonaparte has made himself more or less unpopular, on various occasions, and he is now accused of embarrassing the party by offending the south through a recent ruling, on the immigration laws.

The last session of congress devoted considerable attention to labor conditions in the south, and the southern members were urged to encourage immigration, by offering all necessary inducements to foreigners to locate in those midst.

The labor problem is the most serious of any which confronts this section of the country, for while the colored brother is largely in evidence, he refuses to work on plantations, and spends his time in the towns and cities either loafing or engaged in some light employment.

The question of how to dispose of our rapidly increasing foreign population has become perplexing, question. New York, the principal port of entry, is thronged with this class of people, and thousands of them could find employment and better condition by seeking homes in other sections of the country.

The plan which congress had in mind, was to land many of these people at New Orleans, and distribute them through the south, where their services were in demand.

It was a commendable plan and should have been encouraged, but is likely to be defeated by the over-zealous attorney general, who seems to be a stickler for the literal interpretation of law.

"The opinion rendered by the attorney general today declares that when a state, through its regular board of immigration, holds out the promise of employment to an intending immigrant, even although no employer is specified, and although the immigrant is free to secure any employment he sees fit, there's a distinct violation of the contract labor law."

The Chicago Tribune in commenting says:

"The attorney general does not, it has been stated, insist that a state shall not pay the passage of an immigrant, but he does hold that no promise of employment whatsoever must be made, either by a state or an individual. This is a blow which seems to dispose entirely of the movement which had gained such headway in the south to induce Europeans, by promise of employment and by payment of passage money, to go to the south instead of the congested north Atlantic cities."

There is no class of servants, whether in public or private employ, who are quite so obnoxious as the man who is governed absolutely by ironclad laws.

Railroads, and all great corporations, have a code of laws for the direction of employes, who hold positions of trust and responsibility, but the man who is governed by them absolutely, in the expense of judgment and common sense, soon becomes a time-server and unprofitable servant.

The men who go to the front and command respect, are the men who get business. This is just as true of public, as of private business, and it is to be regretted that Mr. Bonaparte did not rise to the occasion, and at least leave undisturbed a dead-letter law that should never have been resurrected.

The southern states need the white immigrant, and congress endeavored to help the south secure his services. The attorney general should take a vacation.

WHERE ROCKEFELLER'S TUNE IS

People who are waiting anxiously for the Standard Oil company to pay the "Landis fine," imagine that John D. Rockefeller has $29,000,000 around the house all the time, while he could go down in his vest-pocket and fish out the $240,000 at pleasure.

It is difficult to realize that men of great wealth are usually men of great activity, and that their money is closely invested in all sorts of industrial enterprises, and that an army of men find employment, because of those investments. The Philadelphia Press says very truthfully that:

"Stupendous as is the fortune of John D. Rockefeller, even now not matching it in accord with the depreciated prices of securities of all kinds, nevertheless it is a fortune which he is sharing, to a great extent, with the entire country.

"The investment in Standard Oil securities represents a national industry, whatever may be said of the morality of its business conduct, which could not be greatly or even in small measure impaired without also reducing the earning capacity of some 200,000 artisans and wage-earners, without seriously affecting the railroads, and in that way the earning power of them; without cutting heavily into our export trade and in various other ways seriously checkng national, industrial and mining activities.

"In addition to that, almost all of Mr. Rockefeller's income has been invested in other industries and in railroads. His fortune at one time was estimated at approximately $600,000,000 and his income at $10,000,000 a year, and this estimate is not the mere guesswork of those who are upon the curb or sidewalk of Wall street, but came from men who had a fair basis for the judgment.

"Almost every dollar of it, excepting the relatively small sum needed for his domestic expenses, has been reinvested, and from the investment there come gains to wage-earners and profitable employment of industry in many directions. Therefore, it would be impossible to get back from Mr. Rockefeller any portion of this enormous fortune, even if there were any conceivable way short of heavy fines or so-called by which it could be done, without also taking it out of industry.

A CUT OF A HEATING STOVE

can be made to look very fine—but to be safe is not it best to see the stove itself. And is it not a good idea to look at one with a good character? One that has proved conclusively that no other is as really good. You do not buy a heating stove very often—why not have one that is right? The expense is no more, unless you can be satisfied with a very cheap one and then you get just what you pay for.

IT PAYS TO GET YOUR EYES OPEN.

"Dr. Richards, what will you charge to crown this tooth for me?" said a party to the dentist the other day. She was from a neighboring city and evidently had her eyes wide open on dental prices.

"5," was the reply. "All right; go ahead and fix it," said she.

"They charge $10 in my town and here I can come to Janesville and have a whole day looking at the new fall styles in the stores, get my tooth fixed up and have enough money left to buy me a new hat."

And she was right.

If you choose Dr. Richards for your dentistry you can save about HALF what you will have to pay if you go elsewhere.

Dr. Richards refuses to join a combine, an agreement or an understanding with other Dentists which will establish or maintain high prices.

He does his work RIGHT. He saves you PAIN. His prices are REASONABLE.

JURY DRAWN FOR THE DUGAN TRIAL

QUOTA OF TWELVE COMPLETED JUST BEFORE 3 P. M. TODAY.

POINT SCORED BY DEFENSE

Objection to the Oath Was Sustained and New One Substituted with Phrase "According to Law" Omitted.

APOLLO CLUB LIKED MISS GRACE NELSON

Soprano From Chicago Captivated With Personality and Beautiful Voice.

Question—"Do you believe that there are any circumstances which justify a person in taking the law into his own hands?"

Answer—"Well, there might be, but I believe in the enforcement of the law."

Question—"Can you try this case just as impartially as though the defendant were a man?"

Answer—"I know of no reason why I cannot."

Question—"Are you a married man?"

Answer—"Yes, sir."

Question—"Have you any daughters?"

Answer—"Yes, sir—three."

Question—"Married?"

Answer—"Two of them are."

Thirteen of the panel of eighteen men drawn from the body of the county for jury duty in the trial of the criminal action of the State vs. Florence Dugan, brought on the charge of assault with intent to kill, were examined by the attorneys this morning and only two had been dismissed up to twelve o'clock.

The question relating to self-execution of the law was unanswered with reservations by several of them, self-defense and a particular crime against members of one's family being the stumbling blocks.

Without exception the prospective jurors averred that to them a man or a woman was the same before the law. F. P. Welch of the town of Janesville and Don Van Wart of the city of Beloit were excused because they had formed opinions relative to the guilt or innocence of the defendant which it would require evidence to overcome. M. B. Downing of Milton was the last man called to the jury box and took the seat left vacant by Mr. Welch. His examination was deferred until this afternoon. The men seated in the twelve swivel chairs, in the order in which they were questioned, were then as follows: S. S. Purinton of the town of Union, Charles White of the town of Porter, H. T. Harper of Footville, Charles Clifford of Evansville, William Smith of Evansville, Seth Crall of the town of Center, Alex Paul of Milton Junction, William Miller of Milton, Edward Jones of the town of Beloit, Samuel Catts of the city of Beloit, W. E. Shoemaker of the town of Janesville, and M. B. Downing.

Plea of Insanity Entered.

Before the examination began the jurors were informed that the defendant had filed a plea stating that at the time of the commission of the crime she was insane and that it would be their duty to pass upon this question before passing upon her guilt or innocence.

Unwritten Law Ruled Out.

Most of the jurors appeared to have had casual information of the case and to be quite content with themselves on this score. Mr. Van Wart was the only man examined who appeared to be really anxious to be relieved of jury duty. Atty. Nolan objected to District Attorney Fisher's question: "Do you believe in the unwritten law?" and the court ruled it out. When Mr. Purinton was asked whether or not he was a client of or ever transacted business with the counsel for the defense, he answered: "I have never had anything to do with the law." "Well, your daughter married a lawyer, didn't she?" inquired Mr. Nolan. "That's why I keep out of it," was the jury's retort.

Prisoner Dressed in Black.

Florence Dugan, the defendant, is garbed in sombre black and wears a veil of the same hue. Her mother and two sisters and the latter's children—one a babe in arms—occupy seats adjoining on the south side of the courtroom. T. S. Nolan is seated at the table nearest Judge Piffeld's bench and District Attorney J. L. Fisher and Atty. W. G. Thorpe are at the table just behind him. Sheriff L. L. Fisher, City Marshal Appley and Officer William Mason, are other figures in the court room. Filling all the available chairs and huddled up in a solid line around the windows is the "gallery" of spectators—largely made up of curiosity-seekers—but containing also the relatives and friends of the accused, including a few women. French Grant is acting as court reporter.

Jury Is Completed.

M. B. Downing, the last of the panel called to the box, seemed to have some very positive ideas on the rights of individuals to take the law into their own hands under certain circumstances and he was rigidly examined by Atty. Wheeler this afternoon. At bottom, however, it finally appeared that he had only more stubbornly insisted that he had no prejudice on either side in the case that is about to be tried and was finally accepted by both the prosecution and the defense. The jury was now completed and it stood at the conclusion of the morning session.

Defense Scores a Point.

It was fifteen minutes to three when Clerk of Court A. C. Thorpe called upon the jury to rise and commenced the administration of an oath binding them to "true verdict given according to the law and the evidence." These words had scarcely been spoken when Atty. T. S. Nolan entered an objection. He said that the jury was not to try the case according to law but solely on the evidence and cited Section 469 of the Statutes. Judge Piffeld said that it had been customary to administer the obligation in this form but after referring to the law instructed the clerk to read administer it in form therein given which read as follows: "Do you swear that you will well and truly try the cause of the State of Wisconsin vs. Florence Dugan according to the evidence, so help you God?" The jury had been standing all this time and the point that the case was to be tried on the evidence could scarcely have been driven in more effectively by half a hundred verbal reminders.

Trial Begins in Morning

Having secured a jury with a facility entirely unexpected, neither side was fully prepared to go on with the case, it having been taken for granted that the examination of the witnesses would not begin until Wednesday morning. The beginning of the trial proper was therefore deferred until nine o'clock tomorrow morning. By reason of the insanity plea which has been entered, the opening address will be made by the defense.

TAKES FIRST STEP FOR NAVIGATION

GREAT HENNEPIN CANAL READY TO BE OPENED.

MIGHT AFFECT JANESEVILLE

Waters of Rock River Are Turned Into It at Sterling—Why Not Extend It North.

Were it not for the many dams that block the Rock river between Janesville and Sterling, Illinois, boats might soon start at this city and go clear down through the Rock, thence into the Mississippi river and so on down to New Orleans. It would mean that the crops of the Rock river valley would find a market at the deep water. The way has been opened by the people of Sterling who have turned the waters of the placid Rock into the great canal that has been thirty years in building and is known officially as the Hennepin canal but usually as the Illinois and Mississippi canal. In this period of dredging of deep waterways to the Gulf would not be a good move to suggest that the Rock river receive some of the millions that are to be spent by the Rivers and Harbors commission in making the inland streams of the country navigable? It would take but a small portion of the sum they will ask congress to appropriate to make the Rock a navigable stream with an entrance to the Gulf. It would mean the locking around the dams and the deepening of the river channel, but in days past the Mississippi river boats used to come as far as Janesville, why not again?

The development of such a plan would mean much careful consideration on the part of the government engineers and could not be accomplished in a year but would ultimately bring the Rock river valley, one of the most fertile in the middle West, into the market independent of the railroads. Forty years ago the citizens of Janesville were much interested in a similar project which if consummated at that time would have meant much to this pioneer country. It is but a few years ago that Rockford sought to have congress make an appropriation to aid them in making the Rock navigable for large river steamers and if they considered the plan feasible why not now for Janesville? Sterling has made the initial move by turning the water of the Rock into the new canal and it might be followed up by fleets of boats hailing from Janesville, Beloit and Rockford appearing at the docks in St. Louis and New Orleans.

COTTON CONGRESS OPENED

DELEGATES FROM MANY LANDS AT ATLANTA CONFERENCE.

Gov. Hoke Smith Welcomes Them—Questions of Vast Import to Industry Will Be Discussed.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 8.—With delegates present representing every phase of the cotton industry from the time it leaves the planters' hands to the time when the product, woven into fabrics, is sent to the markets of the world, and including representatives of many foreign countries, the International conference of cotton spinners and growers met at the state capitol building in this city Monday for a three days' session.

Dr. Willard McChesney has returned from Rochester, Minn., where he went to be present at the recent operation of the Drs. Mayo on E. L. Shepard of this city.

More than 500 delegates were present, nearly a hundred of these representing the great mills of Georgia, Great Britain, France, Italy, Spain and Portugal, with an aggregate wealth in farm lands, cotton crop and mills of nearly $4,000,000,000.

A lively fight for regulation or prohibition of speculative dealing in cotton was also indicated when Congressman Heflin of Alabama introduced a resolution asking the conference to memorialize congress and the British parliament to stop speculation in cotton except that actually owned. But the fact that an investigation following similar resolution had resulted in a refusal by the British lawmaking body to disturb existing conditions was brought out, and a favorable report, the subcommittee to which the matter was finally referred, will undoubtedly be accompanied by a vigorous minority report against any such action.

Gov. Hoke Smith of Georgia, in his address of welcome to the delegates, caused much applause by advocating the gluing, compressing and baling of the cotton on the plantation and abolishing the manipulation of the middle man, and undoubtedly this feature of the cotton industry will receive much attention.

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY E. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY

"Well," said Aurora, throwing the empty sweetmeat bag out of the window and brushing her lap, "so far as I can discover, Mrs. Krill is a perfectly respectable person and has lived for thirty years as the landlady of the Red Pig. Matilda acknowledged that her mistress had inherited the money of Lemuel Krill, and Matilda knows all about the murder."

"Matilda is wrong," said the detective dryly; "Mrs. Krill gets the money."

Aurora smiled. "From what I heard, Mrs. Krill has to do what her mother tells her. She's nobody, and her mother is all the world. Matilda confessed that her mistress had behaved very well to her. When the money came she gave up the Red Pig to Matilda Junk, who is now the landlady."

"With a proviso she should hold her tongue."

"No, Mrs. Krill, as far as I can learn, has nothing to conceal. Even if it becomes known in London that she was the landlady of a small pub I don't think it will matter."

"Did you ask questions about Lady Hartje's murder?"

"No. You gave me only a hint when you sent me down. I didn't like to venture on ground I wasn't sure of, I'm more cautious than you."

"Well, I'll tell you everything now," said Hurd, and gave a rapid sketch of what he had learned from the news-papers and the Scotland Yard papers relative to the Sandal affair. Aurora nodded.

"But Matilda Junk said nothing of that. She merely stated that Mr. Lemuel Krill had gone to London over twenty years ago and that his wife knew nothing of him until she saw the landlady."

"Huh," said Hurd again as the train slowed down to the Christchurch station, "it seems all fair and above board. What about Jessop?"

"Knowing so little of the Lady Hartje case, I didn't inquire about him," said Aurora. "I've told you everything."

"Any one else stopping at the inn?"

"No. And it's not a bad little place, after all. The rooms are clean and the food good, and the charges low. I'd rather stop at the Red Pig, small as it is, than at the big hotel. The chores—oh, they are delightfully hot!" Miss Qian screwed her small face into a smile of ecstasy. "But then, native maids like them."

Hurd started. "Curious—a native?"

"Yes—a man called Hokar."

"Aurora, that's the man who left the sugar on the counter of Norman's shop. I forgot you don't know about that," and Hurd rapidly told her of the episode.

"It's strange," said Miss Qian, nodding with a faraway look. "It would seem that Mrs. Krill knew of the whereabouts of her husband before she saw the landlady."

"And possibly about the murder also," said Hurd.

Brother and sister looked at one another. The case was becoming more and more interesting. Mrs. Krill evidently knew more than she chose to admit. But at this moment the train stopped, and they got out. Hurd took his handbag and walked into the town with his pretty sister tripping beside him. She gave him an additional piece of information before they arrived at the Red Pig. "This Hokar is not at all popular," she said. "They say he eats cats and dogs. Yes, I've talked to several old women, and they say they lost their animals. One cat was found strangled in the yard, and—"

"Strangled?" interrupted the detective. "Huh, and the man's an Indian, possibly a thief!"

Difficult Breathing

Short breath, fluttering, palpitation, sinking spells are symptoms of a weak heart, struggling to do its work. It must keep the blood in circulation to carry nourishment to make flesh, bone and muscle, and remove the worn-out particles. When it cannot do this, it must have help. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure gives strength to the heart nerves and muscles, and increases the heart action.

"I am glad to say that I am so much improved in health, Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me when several doctors failed. I think no other medicine could do more for what Heart Cure has done. My heart was so bad that it could not at times. I had difficulty in getting my breath, my heart beat so fast at times that I thought it impossible to live without relief; the pain was so severe, the heart side, and the nerves were all strained; I had almost given up all hope of being cured, and I am sure I would not, if I had not taken the Heart Cure. I take the Heart Cure in recommending Dr. Miles' Heart Cure to all who suffer with heart disease."

My ladies, Mrs. Krill and Mrs. Maud, They had this house and lot for years respectable. I worked for 'em ten, and when my ladies comes in for a fortig, for a fortig therre is, they gave me the goodwill of the Red

Fig. To think of Debby being the servant of poor Mr. Krill as was killed. Who killed 'im?"

"Doesn't your mistress know?"

"She!" cried Matilda indignantly and bawling up. "Why, she was always alookin' for him, not as she loved him overmuch. And as he is dead, sir, it's no more as what he oughter be, seeing as he killed a poor lady in this very house. You'll sleep in her room tonight," added Matilda, as if that was a pleasure. "Strangled, she was."

"I think I heard of that. But Lady Hartje should committed suicide."

Matilda rubbed her nose after the Deborah fashion. "Well, sir, my ladies were never sure which it was, and, of course, it was before my time considerable, being more nor twenty year back. But the man as did it is dead and let my ladies his money, as he oughter. An' Miss Maud's reg'ln' to marry a real gen'l—" Matilda glanced at the photograph. "I always said he was a gen'l, he's so 'mighty like and wearin' evening dress at meals, etc."

"Who, the author says so. Still, it's queer, this strangling, and then the cruel way in which the man was murdered. Just what a Hindoo would do. The sugar, too?"

"Oh, nonsense! Hokar left the sugar by mistake. If he had intended to murder Norman he wouldn't have given it to himself anyway."

"I expect he never thought any one would guess he was a thief. The novel is not one usually read nowadays. It was the newest chance that Miss Norman came across it and told Beecot."

"I don't believe in such coincidences," said Aurora dryly, for in spite of her fluffy, kittenish looks she was a very practical person. "But here we are at the Red Pig. Neo and comfy, isn't it?"

"Did they ever visit Mr. Hay in July?"

"No, they didn't," snapped Matilda, with a change of tone which did not escape Hurd, "and I don't know, sir, why you ask them questions."

"My good woman, I ask no questions. If I do, you need not reply. Let us change the subject. My sister tells me you make good curries in this hotel."

"Hokar, no, both" but a plain cook."

"Oh! He's an Indian?"

"Yes, he is, sir. A pure Indian, as I suppose he took up with when he came here drenched with rain and weary. Ah, Indians was always good and kind and Christlike!"

Privately Hurd thought this description did not apply very well to the lady in question, but he was careful not to contradict her. He pretended to joke. "I wonder you don't marry this Indian and keep him here always to make the curries I have heard of."

"Me marry a blackie!" cried Matilda, tucking her rough head. "Well, sir, I never," her breath failed her, "an' him goin' about the country."

"What do you mean by that?"

"What I say," said Miss Junk. "I'll stop here, Christlike, for days and then go off to sell things as a 'hawk.' My par was a 'hawk,' sir, but a white, white man of the finest."

Hurd was about to ask another question, when a hokey voice was heard singing somewhat out of tune. "What?" asked Hurd irritably.

"Lo! sir, wat nerves you 'ave!"

"The only Captain Jessop match himself appy-like."

"Captain Jessop!" Hurd laughed. He had run down his man at last.

Color of Eyes Important.

The color of the eyes is said to depend upon a pigment which supplies them with color. But this coloring pigment is not always reliable. Deep blue eyes will look faded if one is faded. The color pigment does not flow freely, if it agitated they will darken and deepen in hue.

Temper Your Tones.

Guard yourself carefully from falling into careless habits of voice. Often a sharp voice shows far more ill will than the heart feels, but people do not know that the speaker's "hark" is worse than her bite," and they believe her to be ill-tempered and disagreeable, so watch the tone in which you speak, and take care that it is gentle and sweet.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the running system as no other tonic can, in which alcohol is used. The active medicine principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherry bark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. V. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, Kling, Sedgley, Cox, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia, as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

"The Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and through them, the whole system. Thus all skin afflictions, blisters, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to introduce their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist doesn't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. V. V. Pierce, Invalid Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large sum of the All-Healing Salve will be sent you by return mail.

"What ladies?" asked Hurd, pretending ignorance.

"My ladies, Mrs. Krill and Mrs. Maud. They had this house and lot for years respectable. I worked for 'em ten, and when my ladies comes in for a fortig, for a fortig therre is, they gave me the goodwill of the Red

Fig. To think of Debby being the servant of poor Mr. Krill as was killed. Who killed 'im?"

"Doesn't your mistress know?"

"She!" cried Matilda indignantly and bawling up. "Why, she was always alookin' for him, not as she loved him overmuch. And as he is dead, sir, it's no more as what he oughter be, seeing as he killed a poor lady in this very house. You'll sleep in her room tonight," added Matilda, as if that was a pleasure. "Strangled, she was."

"I think I heard of that. But Lady Hartje should committed suicide."

Matilda rubbed her nose after the Deborah fashion. "Well, sir, my ladies were never sure which it was, and, of course, it was before my time considerable, being more nor twenty year back. But the man as did it is dead and let my ladies his money, as he oughter. An' Miss Maud's reg'ln' to marry a real gen'l—" Matilda glanced at the photograph. "I always said he was a gen'l, he's so 'mighty like and wearin' evening dress at meals, etc."

"Who, the author says so. Still, it's queer, this strangling, and then the cruel way in which the man was murdered. Just what a Hindoo would do. The sugar, too?"

"Oh, nonsense! Hokar left the sugar by mistake. If he had intended to murder Norman he wouldn't have given it to himself anyway."

"I expect he never thought any one would guess he was a thief. The novel is not one usually read nowadays. It was the newest chance that Miss Norman came across it and told Beecot."

"Hokar, no, both" but a plain cook."

"Oh! He's an Indian?"

"Yes, he is, sir. A pure Indian, as I suppose he took up with when he came here drenched with rain and weary. Ah, Indians was always good and kind and Christlike!"

Privately Hurd thought this description did not apply very well to the lady in question, but he was careful not to contradict her. He pretended to joke. "I wonder you don't marry this Indian and keep him here always to make the curries I have heard of."

"Me marry a blackie!" cried Matilda, tucking her rough head. "Well, sir, I never," her breath failed her, "an' him goin' about the country."

"What do you mean by that?"

"What's a thug?" asked Aurora, staring.

Hurd explained. "I ran through the book lent by Beecot last night," he added, "and was so interested I sat up till dawn!"

"You do look chippy," said his sister caustically, "but from what you say, there are no thugs living."

"No, the author says so. Still, it's queer, this strangling, and then the cruel way in which the man was murdered. Just what a Hindoo would do. The sugar, too?"

"Oh, nonsense! Hokar left the sugar by mistake. If he had intended to murder Norman he wouldn't have given it to himself anyway."

HARTJE RESUMES FIGHT ON HIS WIFE

ASSERTS HE HAS LETTERS THAT PROVE ALL HIS CHARGES.

WANTS CASE REOPENED

Correspondence Between Mrs. Hartje and Coachman Madine and Ida Scott and Howard Lappe Obtained.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—Claiming that they have letters which passed between Thomas Madine, coachman, and Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, which will result in a complete reversal of affairs, counsel for Augustus Hartje, the wealthy Pittsburgh manufacturer, appeared before the Pennsylvania superior court here Monday to argue a petition for reopening the sensational suit for divorce which he brought against his wife.

The petition for reopening the case was filed with the court in chambers on Saturday and has not been made public officially. The attorneys in the case expected the argument would be heard Monday, but the court adjourned without giving them an opportunity to be heard. It is now said that the arguments will be heard next Monday, as the court instructed the attorneys to notify counsel representing Mrs. Hartje of the application and it is said that both sides have agreed to have that matter brought up on that day.

Allegations Made by Hartje.

In the petition presented to the court for Mr. Hartje he recites that since the hearing in the case he has secured letters written by Thomas Madine, the coachman, while he was in Ireland, to Mrs. Hartje while she was at the Hotel Victoria in London, and others which she wrote to the coachman from there. He relates that he is in a position to prove that Mrs. Hartje arranged with the employees of the hotel to have the letters delivered privately to her and that she supplied Madine with envelopes addressed to herself. He further avers that Mrs. Hartje arranged with a hair dresser, Ambrosia, of 274 Rue St. Honore, Paris, to mail letters through him to Madine and that she received letters from the coachman and sent money to him through the same avenue.

Letters from Scott Girls.

Other letters which the petitioner says he has found since the case was heard were written by Miss Scott, sister of Mrs. Hartje. It is said they were addressed to Howard Lappa, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in which the writers indicate that unless their parents paid them a certain sum of money each month they would "turn in" for the petitioner. These letters were written, according to the petition, when a hokey voice was heard singing somewhat out of tune. "What?" asked Hurd irritably.

"Lo! sir, wat nerves you 'ave!"

"The only Captain Jessop match himself appy-like."

"Captain Jessop!" Hurd laughed. He had run down his man at last.
